Communications from the President

Dear Friends in League,

Although the temperatures are still low, the daylight hours are getting longer, and we turn ourselves to thoughts of Spring. For League members that means Spring Elections on Tuesday, April 2 and all that goes into preparing for them.

- There is a very important statewide election for a Justice of the Wisconsin State Supreme Court on the ballot in addition to local elections.

- The Voter Services Committee needs additional volunteers to help newly eligible voters in our area high schools, colleges and other locations register to vote. You may also know of voters who have moved recently who need to update their registration. The deadline for online voter registration (OVR) at <http://myvote.wi.gov> is March 13.

- Remember that all voters in Wisconsin can request an absentee ballot be mailed to them for any reason.

- The LWV of Janesville, with partners Forward Janesville and JATV, will conduct a City Council Candidates Forum on Tuesday, March 12, 6:30-8:00 pm at the Hedberg Public Library. You will be able to find a link to JATV's webcast of that forum on our website when it become available.

- Candidates for the Janesville School Board have provided written responses to questions posed by the

LWV. You can find them and links to other election information on our website: <http://lwvjvl.org/Spring2019elections.html>

Other LWV Spring events include

- Three-part documentary series:

Race: The Power of an Illusion that will be held on the second Saturdays of March, April and May in the BASICS Community Room from 10:00-noon. Come early to save your seat and get a cup of a coffee before the viewing and discussion of the films begin. (More information and links to background reading are in the Calendar section of our webpage.)

- The History of Citizenship and U.S. Immigration Policy program presented by Beatrice McKenzie, Professor of American History at Beloit College, on Wednesday, April 10, at 6:30 pm on the UWW at Rock County Campus.

- LWVJVL Annual Meeting will be held the evening of Wednesday, May 22. We are excited to announce that Erin Grunze, the Executive Director of the LWV WI, will be our guest speaker. We have gained a lot of new members to our League in the past few years, and Erin is in an excellent position to help all of us better understand the structure and functions of the three levels of the LWV, with emphasis on how the work of the state office supports our local League and furthers the mission of the League of Women Voters.

When I recently reviewed the local positions of our Janesville League, I discovered that we had not been complying with the Diversity position that we adopted in 2017. Among other items, that position committed us to place a diversity policy statement in our monthly newsletter and on our website. We are correcting that oversight by placing the LWV Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Policy statement in our newsletter beginning with this issue of “The Voter.”

I encourage all LWVJVL members to review our local positions between now and the date of our Annual Meeting. They are posted on our website at http://lwwjvl.org/local\_positions.html. Our League has developed these positions over the years through study and consensus. Each year at our Annual Meeting we vote to re-adopt these positions and/or to make recommendations for revision or further study. At that meeting we can also vote to initiate study toward developing a new local position, with the understanding that any local position our League develops must be based on and be consistent with positions that have been taken by LWVUS and LWVWI that you can find on their websites. I am confident that reviewing these positions will make you feel proud that you are a member of this organization.

Thank you!!

Linda

The Broken Ladder; How Inequality Affects the Way We Think, Live, and Die, by Keith Payne

We're all aware of studies examining the impact of poverty on children and their development. This book, written by a professor of psychology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, focuses on the wider scope of adults at all economic levels and cites numerous experiments that show not only how poverty/ecoomic inequality impacts those at the lower rungs of our economic ladder, but also how that inequality seeps into the minds of us all.

He says, “Among modern developed societies, inequality is not primarily a matter of the actual amount of money people have. It is, rather, people’s used for official business.

I joined the LWV over 50 years ago because I was intrigued by a grass-roots, multi-issue, non-partisan political organization. I was in total agreement with the core League purpose to promote informed and active citizen participation in government. The League has always emphasized that the processes of governing are as important as the outcomes. That is why the League continues to speak out boldly in support of a non-partisan redistricting process and of good governing practices, such as transparency, adequate opportunity for public participation, meeting rules that respect all voices in the process of developing legislation and public policies. League governs itself the way we believe governments should operate. All voices are respected and considered. Robert's Rules of Order are

When I joined, I met the most interesting people who just wanted to make our community, our state, our nation a safe, healthy, and fair place for all residents to live. I think that is the common denominator for our members in the 21st century as well. By simply joining the League you support the League's Voters Services and Advocacy activities and make our collective voice stronger. That said, those members who can get involved in the studies and on the Board really get the greatest value for their dues. In addition to Voters Services we have 2 fairly active policy issues committees: The Diversity, Equity and Inclusion committee and the Homelessness and Affordable Housing Options committee. Redistricting and Immigration are ongoing concerns as well. If any of these issues interest you, please share that with any member of the Board.

sense of where they stand in relation to others. Feeling poor matters—not just being poor. Regardless of their average incomes, countries or states with greater levels of income inequality have much higher rates of all the social maladies we associate with poverty, including lower than average life expectancies, serious health problems, mental illness, and crime.”

People on the lower rungs of the ladder have little trust in investing for the future. Poverty increases stress. He also cites studies that offer explanations of how people’s perception of their social status affects their political beliefs and leads to greater political divisions, something we’ve all pondered since the 2016 election. Economic anxieties also fuel racial conflict.

One chapter examines inequality between blacks and whites and tries to explain why our police are prone to overreact in their interactions with black males... seeing weapons where there were none: “police are programmed to see danger.”

While I was somewhat aware of the social comparisons that we make daily, I was unaware of how deeply those unconscious thoughts guide our behaviors. Interesting, depressing, and sometimes tiring in forcing the reader to focus hard to understand the meaning(s) of the experiments’ results, the book does end on a hopeful note: “We can, in fact, exert more control over how we compare. Controlled comparison means, first, learning to recognize when we are in the grips of such a compulsion, and, second, choosing wisely what kind of comparison is really relevant and useful. The idea here is not to stop comparing; it is to compare more wisely....The point is not to compare with the winners (upper rungs of the ladder), or to compare with the losers (bottom rungs of the ladder). It is to compare, with lucidity. (In different circumstances, that might be me.)

Immigration

Immigration policies should promote reunification of immediate families; meet economic, business and employment needs; and be responsive to those facing political persecution or humanitarian crises.

Why it matters

All persons should receive fair treatment under the law and it is critical for the U.S. to encourage immigrant participation in our democracy.

What we're doing

We support federal immigration laws that provide efficient, expeditious systems for immigrants to enter the United States. Seeking asylum at points of entry into the United States is part of our legal immigration process and assaults on asylum seekers are un-American. The League of Women Voters stands in solidarity with immigrants and our partners in the immigrant rights community. The 116th Congress must take immediate action to pass common sense, fair immigration policies that end the crisis at our border, ends the separation of families, and provides a path to citizenship.

The LWV of Janesville supports all positions of the LWVUS and the LWVWI.
